Sandhills offers 'mini-mesters'

Sandhills Community College offers a curriculum semester that takes only ten weeks to complete, yet students receive a full semester's worth of instruction and full college credits.

Spring Mini-Mester begins Tuesday, February 14 with registration on Monday, February 13 from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Twenty-five classes will be offered. Subjects include anthropology, computers, two courses in communications, four different English courses, two history courses, two humanities courses, a lifeguard training course, philosophy, psychology, and three sociology courses.

With the exception of the lifeguard training class, minimester classes are taken online. The computer class is a hybrid, which is a combination of online instruction and traditional classroom interaction, which will be on Mondays from 6 p.m. until 7:50 p.m.

Mini-mester classes do move along faster than the regular fifteen-week semester but nothing is omitted. The quality of instruction and number of assignments remain the same.

A reliable computer with an Internet connection is required. Those wishing to take mini-mester classes but do not have a computer are welcome to utilize the computers in the Learning Resources Center in Boyd Library.

Time to begin spring planting

Onions can be started from seed, sets, or transplants. Starting from seed requires about six weeks to produce a good sized transplant indoors before transplanting outdoors and would be too late for the plant to form a bulb in the garden. Seed is the cheapest way to start onions but produces irregular bulbs and is only good for early-maturing varieties. An onion "set" is a small onion bulb grown from seed the previous year. They may be used to produce green onions or mature, dry bulbs. The sets should be separated into two sizes. The small sets are used for mature, dry bulbs. The large sets are used for green onions as they frequently form a seed stalk instead of a bulb.

For green onions, sets are planted 1 1/2 inches deep, close enough to touch each other, in rows 12 inches apart. When the plants are 4 inches high, soil can be placed around the stems to produce long, white stems. They can be harvested in 30 days.

For dry onions, the sets are planted 1 inch deep, 2 inches apart, in rows 12-16 inches apart. Soil is not placed around dry onions as this may induce the bulb to rot in storage.

Transplants are an easy way to produce an early crop of large, mature bulbs. Practically none of the transplants form seed stalks. Space the transplants the same as for sets.

In order for onions to form large bulbs, they need to be planted between February 1 and March 15. Onions are adapted to a wide range of temperatures and are frost tolerant. Best production is obtained when cool temperatures (55-75 degrees F) prevail over an extended period of time, permitting good shoot and root development before bulbing starts. After bulbing begins, high temperature and low relative humidity extending into the harvest and curing period are desirable. A constant supply of adequate moisture is necessary for best results. For onions started from transplants, light mulch will help conserve moisture for uniform growth.

It's extremely important to plant onion sets or plants in our area as early in the spring as you can, to allow the plant to make as much shoot and root growth as possible to enable it to form a good-sized bulb during a 10-12 hour day. In other words, once the number of daylight hours is satisfied, the plant will form a bulb, regardless of its size. The size of the mature onion bulb depends on the number and size of the tops. For each leaf, there will be a "ring" of onion. The larger the leaf, the larger the ring becomes.

Good varieties to buy (sets or transplants) include Ebenezer, Excell, Stuttgarter, and Early Grano. These will mature into dry onions in about 100 days. Bunching varieties, such as Beltsville Bunching and White Portugal, will produce a bunching onion, or scallion with either small or no bulbs. White or Yellow Sweet Spanish and Bermuda onions are usually started from transplants.

Harvest onions when 3/4 of the tops dry and fall over. On sunny, breezy days, onions may be pulled and left in the garden for a day or two to dry before they are taken to a curing area. Curing is done by placing them in a well-ventilated area until the necks are thoroughly dry. With warm temperatures, good air circulation, and low humidity, curing should be completed within two weeks after harvest. Onions tops canbebraidedtogetherandhungina cool, dry place or cut the tops, leaving one inch of stem and hung in mesh bags. If properly dried and stored, onions will last all winter. Check periodically for rotting onions and discard. Yellow varieties store best, followed by white, and the Bermuda types have the shortest storage time.

Spinach

Spinach seed will begin to germinate when soil temperatures reach 38 to 40 degrees F and needs to be planted early since seed will not germinate well at warmer temperatures. Spinach starts slowly but rapidly increases its growth as warmer weather begins to prevail. Many newer types of spinach available are flat leaf types that are used primarily in the processing industry since the leaves can be easily washed and cleaned. Most garden-type spinach is semisavoyed (crinkled), which is easier to wash and clean than typical, older varieties that are heavily savoyed.

Popular varieties include Seven R, Marathon, Melody, and Grandstand. Bloomsdale Long Standing is an older, heavily savoyed variety that is being rapidly replaced by the semi-savoyed leaf varieties. Harvest spinach by cutting the leaves from the side of the plant to keep the plants growing and producing more leaves. At a certain point in the spring, the plants will bolt (produce a seed stalk). Early production allows more production before bolting occurs. Once the seed stalk is evident, cut the entire plant and salvage as much of the crop as you can (by freezing or immediate use). Some newer varieties are slow-bolting types that will resist bolting a little longer in the spring.

English Peas

English peas can also be directly seeded into the garden as soon as the soil can be worked in the spring. Snow or freezing temperatures will not bother them. Edible-pod peas are eaten pod and all and are very sweet. Select dwarf varieties so that you don't need to erect a trellis.

Time to Apply Dormant Sprays on Fruit Trees

Watch the weather reports and be prepared to apply dormant sprays to fruit trees. The temperatures should be high enough (at least 40 degrees F) so the spray material dries before the temperature drops to freezing. Otherwise, plant tissues might be injured.

A dormant oil application on fruit trees and blueberries will help control scale insects. Remember that dormant oil is not a cure-all to control all insects that attack fruit trees. Timely applications of other insecticides throughout the growing season will ensure less insect damaged fruit.

When applying dormant oil, thorough coverage of the limbs, branches, and twigs is very important so that you do not get are-infestation of insects from the unsprayed area of the tree. Applying the spray during mid to late morning is advised so there is time for the spray to dry before the temperatures drop to freezing. Try to apply the oil before buds swell; however, you can apply dormant oil on apples up to the fruit bud growth stage of "green tip".
